Dr. Sean Carleton is a settler scholar whose research examines the history of colonialism, capitalism, and schooling in Canada.

Prof. Brenda Gunn is the Academic and Research Director of the National Centre for Truth and Reconciliation and an advocate for greater recognition of Indigenous peoples' inherent rights as determined by their own legal traditions.

Marc Kruse, JD, is a member of Muscowpetung First Nation in Saskatchewan and the Director of Indigenous Legal Learning and Services at Robson Hall.

A sixties scoop survivor, Dr. Cary Miller is Anishinaabe and descends from St. Croix and Leech Lake communities in Wisconsin and Minnesota. She is Associate Vice-President (Indigenous) Scholarship, Research and Curriculum at the University of Manitoba.

Registration is not required.
