

Dietitian Graduate Recruitment Incentive – Wage Subsidy

The Dietitian Graduate Recruitment Incentive is eligible to any candidate in their final term of either a post degree dietetic practicum or Bachelor or Masters program with an integrated dietetic practicum.

The incentive is a financial reward in the form of a wage subsidy for applying and being the successful candidate for any posted Prairie Mountain Health (PMH) full time, permanent dietitian position. Any student in the final four months of their program can apply for any of the full-time permanent dietitian positions posted on www.prairiemountainhealth.ca.

The successful applicant of a full-time permanent RD position will receive a full-time wage as per the MGEU Professional/Technical collective agreement for three months prior to graduation with the expectation of starting work in the position as soon as possible after graduation. This incentive comes with a return of service commitment of two years to PMH.

In addition to this incentive, PMH also has relocation assistance to help cover moving costs if required.
