COMMUNICATIONS BOOTCAMP FOR STUDENTS

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 8, 2017

2:30 PM - 5:00 PM

219 Animal Science Building

FREE - REGISTRATION REQUIRED

This hands-on workshop for students will provide the tools to effectively dialogue with the public about the food we eat. Featuring three prominent communicators in the realm of science and agriculture, this skills building session will focus on writing, speaking and blogging.

- Jennifer Gardy is a research scientist in Public Health Genomics at UBC, and periodically guest hosts The Nature of Things.
- Owen Roberts is the director of research communications at the University of Guelph and president of the 5,000-member International Federation of Agricultural Journalists, which represents journalists in 40 countries.
- Elizabeth Held is the director of online and millennial engagement at the White House Writers Group. She focuses on food and agriculture issues.

Register now by email to crystal.jorgenson@umanitoba.ca. Please indicate your program and year. Priority seating for senior undergraduate students.

Deadline to register is Monday, February 27 but we recommend early registration as there are only 30 seats available.
