

THE POWER & RESISTANCE IN LATIN AMERICA RESEARCH CLUSTER

presents:

*Agrarian extractivisms, land,
and social reproduction: a
feminist political ecology approach. Cases from Colombia and Ecuador*

DIANA OJEDA (UNIVERSIDAD DE LOS ANDES, BOGOTÁ, COLOMBIA)

NATALIA LANDÍVAR (UNIVERSITY OF MANITOBA)

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 23,
2022 AT 2:30 PM CT

*Please email
landivan@myumanitoba.ca for Zoom link to attend.*

Diana Ojeda is Associate Professor at Cider (Interdisciplinary Center for Development Studies), Universidad de los Andes, Bogotá, Colombia. She holds a PhD degree in Geography from Clark University. Her work bridges feminist political ecology, feminist geopolitics, and social studies of science in study of land grabbing and dispossession in the Colombian Caribbean.

Natalia Landívar is a right-to-food activist and academic committed to socially engaged research. In 2016, she started a PhD at the Natural Resources Institute of the University of Manitoba. She has drawn upon her 15 years of work as an activist advocating for the right to food and peasant's right to inform and articulate her academic research projects. Her MA at the Facultad Latinoamericana de Ciencias Sociales (FLACSO) Ecuador and her current PhD thesis shed light on agrarian policies and the land struggles of grassroots organizations in coastal Ecuador.
