

PUBLIC LECTURE

THE POLITICS OF MASS VIOLENCE IN THE MIDDLE EAST:

This talk will explore how a historiographical focus on mass violence – encompassing the concepts of genocide, ethnic cleansing, forced migration, appropriation of resources, mass imprisonment, and forcible denationalization – can help explain the emergence of a dystopian politics of identity across the modern Middle East.

Laura Robson

Oliver-McCourtney Professor of History, Penn State University

Includes a Q&A on conclusion

THUR, FEBRUARY 4TH, 2021
2:30 PM – 4:00 PM

Via Livestream on the UMIH Facebook page

Brought to you by:

Stephen A. Jarislowsky Chair in the Modern History of the Middle East and North Africa.

Institute for the Humanities

University of Manitoba